SPURS MEDIA SERVICES

GENERAL As the season progresses, additional information is available by contacting the Spurs public relations Director Wayne Witt through the Spurs offices (512-224-4611) or at his home (512-696-3754). The Spurs are anxious to receive fair and accurate coverage by the media and as a result staff members will strive to meet reasonable requests.

CREDENTIALS Official Spurs media passes are required for admission to HemisFair Arena games and for admission to media facilities inside the Arena. There is only one exception to this rule; that being persons with official NBA passes will be admitted. The Spurs have two types of media passes: 1) a permanent, season-long pass will be issued to each media person who covers the Spurs on a regular basis; 2) for those media persons covering the Spurs on a periodic basis, the club provides a single-game pass for specific nights. These are working passes, and they are intended for working media persons only. Credentials information is available by contacting Wayne Witt, and requests must be made prior to noon on game day.

MEDIA GATE Media passes will be honored only at the Media Gate located at the north end of the HemisFair Arena. The Media Gate is adjacent to the Arena service entrance, directly behind Sections 19-22. Again, only an official Spurs media pass or an official NBA media pass will be recognized.

MEDIA ROOM The Spurs Media Room is located at mid-court, directly behind the scorers table, and is open one and one-half hours prior to tipoff. Light snacks and beverages are provided for working members of the media, and admission is by official Spurs or NBA passes. Telephones and a work area are available.

PRESS ROW Seating at the Spurs courtside press row is absolutely limited to media persons covering that particular game. Space is by reservation prior to noon through Wayne Witt on gameday.

SERVICES Prior to gametime, up-to-date rosters, statistics and game notes are made available to working members of the media in the Media Room. During the game, quarterly play-by-play accounts will be provided as will halftime and final game statistics. Quick statistics are distributed during the game. Canfax arrangements can be made through Chuck Balcar at telephone 512-532-9749 in San Antonio. SportsComm is Dan Balcar at 512-696-2330.

RADIO AND TELEVISION Accredited radio and television crews will be seated courtside in the HemisFair Arena. Call-letter banners can be displayed at courtside in areas specified by the Spurs. If statisticians are required, arrangements must be made 24 hours in advance through the Spurs publicity office, and it is the responsibility of the visiting broadcasters to arrange payment. In accordance with NBA policy, payment must be in cash; the minimum is $15. The Spurs publicity office will assist with arranging interviews for tape or live broadcast.

TELEVISION CAMERA LOCATIONS In the HemisFair Arena, camera locations are on the mezzanine level and at end court nearest the visitors bench. No other camera locations are available without permission of the Spurs staff.

PRESS PHOTOGRAPHERS Accredited photographers will be permitted courtside in the HemisFair Arena. Credentials should be requested through the Spurs publicity department, and are available on a game-to-game basis. Official Spurs photographers passes allow admission to the Arena, the Media Room and to the locker rooms.

The following information is a suggested guide for still photographers shooting courtside in the Arena.
Lighting: Tungston with mercury vapor.
Film Type B/W: Tri-X E. I. 1600; Shutter 500; F Stop 2.8
Film Type Color: High Speed Ectachrome Type B, E. I.; Shutter 500; F Stop 2.0.

CINEMATOGRAPHERS Credentials for cinematographers should be requested through the Spurs publicity department, and are available on a game-to-game basis. With credentials, cinematographers will be allowed courtside.
The following is suggested for shooting in the Arena.
Film: Ectachrome 7242 (meter setting ASA 80, 85-B filter), Tungston 3,200 Kelvin.
Limits: Normal exposure of 24 frames per second is approximately 2.8-4.

SPURS RADIO-TV

WOAI RADIO

Fifty thousand WATT, clear-channel WOAI, 1200 on the dial . . . that's the radio home of the San Antonio Spurs for the 1978-1979 NBA season.

WOAI will be the station of the Spurs for the fourth consecutive year, and for the fourth year Terry Stembridge will be mikeside calling all the Spurs action — this is Stembridge's twelfth season with this franchise.

The Spurs like to brag about their association with WOAI, and brag they should. Last season, the Spurs ran a "What's Your 20" contest for gamenight listeners, and responses came from 32 states and two foreign countries. That type of response indicates the Spurs may have the most extensive radio coverage in the entire league.

Again this season, all 82 Spurs regular season games, along with all pre-season and post-season playoff contests will be aired by WOAI.

Additionally, WOAI broadcasts a weekly Doug Moe Show. Then, on game nights, the station produces an NBA show prior to the Spurs action.

Spurs club officials work closely with station personnel in producing the broadcasts. WOAI general manager is John Barger, a man with a varied radio background including being former coordinator of the Dallas Cowboy radio network.

When Stembridge moves before the television cameras for a Spurs game, WOAI Sports Director Greg Haber handles the duties for the radio play-by-play.

KMOL TELEVISION

As they have with WOAI Radio, the Spurs have formed a lasting relationship with San Antonio's KMOL Television, Channel 4, the local affiliate of NBC.

This will be the second consecutive year for the Spurs and KMOL to be in partnership, and it will be the fourth season of the five the Spurs have played in San Antonio.

KMOL General Manager Edward Cheviot and his staff have said they will carry selected Spurs road games during the 1978-1979 campaign, and that the games will be the best possible matchups, providing the greatest amount of excitement and interest for Spurs fans.

As in past seasons, when the Spurs are on the tube, Terry Stembridge will come forth with his play-by-play expertise. Last season, Stembridge called the action on seven regular season games and three playoff tilts, and this year plans have been made for a more comprehensive schedule on television.

SPURS ADMINISTRATION

CONCESSIONS INC.

On paper, the San Antonio Spurs are a complicated corporation. In reality, the Spurs are a San Antonio-owned, San Antonio-loved basketball team that has some 66 investors and stockholders. The Spurs came to town in the spring of 1973, and since that time the formal list of financial backers has about doubled, making the Spurs a most viable operation. The general partner of the Spurs, the group charged with the daily operation of the club, is Concessions Incorporated. But don't be fooled by the tag limited partners applied to many of the backers — their enthusiasm is every bit as great as is the support of those in the general partnership.

ANGELO DROSSOS
PRESIDENT
CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

NBA Executive of the Year . . . Angelo Drossos. So said the prestigious publication THE SPORTING NEWS following the 1977-1978 season and after a vote was taken from among other executives of the league.

Any honor of this magnitude requires many advance hours of hard work, many decisions made, and a foresight to establish reachable goals. These are the things which have marked Angelo Drossos' five years in the field of professional basketball, his five years as the Spurs leader.

When the award was announced, Drossos commented that during the Spurs' five years in San Antonio the club has "drawn lots of sevens", and that the club "has been at the right place at the right time for five years."

Drossos credited the award to his involvement in league affairs and with the running of the Spurs. "I'm much more active than owners of other teams can be or care to be, and I think they appreciate that fact. Certainly, there are many people in the NBA who are smart or smarter and as capable or more capable than I am. It's a question of involvement."

Involvement is it. That's the password to Angelo Drossos and the San Antonio Spurs.

Drossos recalls that his first point of total committment to pro basketball in the Alamo City came on a wintery night back in 1973. That was the evening he returned home from Dallas after another lengthy negotiating session with the owners of the ABA Dallas Chaparrals, a team that was for sale.

That particular night, after having an offer accepted by the Dallas people to move the team to San Antonio, Drossos came home to find several of his potential "heavy money" partners had changed their minds.

"I had this agreement and I felt I had no choice. The next day I went down to the bank and put my personal name on a substantial note. San Antonio had it's team, and baby, I had a committment."

Over and above all the noise about big monies and his name on the line, Drossos had and still has what he terms a "desire to play a vital role in the creation of a major entity in my home city." San Antonio is his home; he went to high school and later St. Mary's University here, and he has spent the majority of his business career here.

"I got particular satisfaction from this peer-group honor, being recognized as one of the league's top executives. To me, it says we have a top organization working with the Spurs, and that translates into something good for my city."

But back to that winter night and the following days at the bank.

Drossos and the other remaining backers let no grass grow under their feet. They went to work and put together a solid money team, and then set about building a solid team on the basketball floor, a team that five years later would capture the NBA Central Division title.

It was moves like purchasing the concessions rights to the Arena, moves like bringing George Gervin and other headliners to town as Spurs, it was becoming involved in the old ABA to the point he was elected league treasurer and later named to a committee pursuing merger with the NBA.

When that amalgamation happened in June, 1976, Drossos led the Spurs to a $5 million bank loan to make sure the team was solvent. He and his partners expanded the stockholders/investors list to more than 60 persons, all with a love for the city and a concern for it's well-being in the form of the Spurs.

Oh yes, Drossos does have other business projects on his mind. He is an associate vice president with Dean Witter and Reynolds Co., an investments concern.

JOHN BEGZOS
GENERAL MANAGER

A simple hand-written note stirred memories one day this past summer in the Spurs offices. It was not so much what the note said, but rather, the paper used.

The note came from John Begzos. The paper carried the heading, "John Begzos, General Sales Manager."

That was the job Begzos came to fill during the early fall of 1973, the Spurs' first year in the city by the Rio. It was a job that needed immediate attention, as the fledgling Spurs were floundering at the box office — this is a fancy way of saying push did not follow shove to see the new ABA team play.

After the 1977-1978 season when the Spurs averaged 9,100 in a less than 10,000-seat building (construction was underway to increase the capacity to 16,000), Begzos can find humor in his original job.

He can joke about nights when the smart-guy Arena announcer (an old story, but a true one) was adamant about introducing the fans rather than the starting lineups. He can recall asking the Arena maintenance folks to turn up the heat because it was cold — no body heat, "the coffee wouldn't even stay hot."

Then, when the tempo quickened, he can recall nights the promotions were bizarre to say the least. The night, for instance, when a 10-cent beer crowd nearly wrecked the building after the suds supply was exhausted; or the night Santa Claus dipped in the eggnog and created havoc in the crowd; or the game when 15,000 at least were turned away at the doors because more Merchants Nights coupons were sold than there were seats.

Oh, the Spurs directed by Begzos still promote their product, but the events have tempered somewhat as the Spurs management team has produced a solid club capable of drawing on its own merits.

When a man is general manager of a division titlist team, as the Spurs were last season, the projects become endless — contract negotiations of all forms, player acquisitions, ticket sales, scheduling, accounting procedures, personnel management, Etc. with a capital E. These are the things causing John Begzos to move with rapid strides year round.

He hails from Walled Lake, Mich., nearby Detroit. He holds two degrees in business from Michigan State University, and he is a true-green supporter of the Spartans.

After college, he fulfilled his obligation to Uncle Sam, doing a highly-decorated — including three purple hearts — infantry tour in Viet Nam.

Finally, the day came when he could get into athletics, his first love. He became office manager of the Class AAA baseball club in Oklahoma City. The next summer, 1972, he moved to San Antonio as general manager of the Class AA baseball team, and directed 251,000 fans into a ball park that had been empty the year before. After that act, he was honored by THE SPORTING NEWS as Texas League and then Class AA Executive of the Year.

One more year was spent at the ball yard, before the call came from the Spurs. We need help said the Spurs management, and you are the guy; use your imagination, but put folks on seats.

And that he did. Attendance that first year finally averaged out at 6,000, then 7,800 the next year, followed by 8,000 and then 9,000 or better the last two seasons. After a few timid steps in the fall of 1973, the Spurs began running at a full tilt, and the Begzos influence was in full bloom.

The 36-year-old Begzos is now vice president and general manager, and just this past summer became a financial investor in the club.

DOUG MOE
HEAD COACH

Doug Moe, last season, finished third in the balloting for NBA coach of the year, and first in the hearts of all loyal Spurs followers.

Doug Moe is a man who has been a professional head coach only two years, both in San Antonio, and has won 57 per cent of his games (94-70 prior to 1978-1979). He also can lay claim to an NBA Central Division title.

But to fans in San Antonio, Doug Moe is better known for his personality which fits the laid-back attitude of Texans in general. Moe is casual, he is outgoing, he is personable, he is a friend to all Spurs fans. And they return that friendship.

There is another important factor to his stature in San Antonio. His teams have played "firehouse" basketball, resembling a genuine, full-blown Texas shootout behind the corral. And Spurs fans revel in it.

Using Moe's full-throttle attack, the Spurs have won an NBA scoring title and have finished second. And all the while shooting 50 per cent as a team.

The 40-year-old (in October) Brooklyn native teaches and preaches the virtues of his "passing game" offense; an attack where everyone is involved, a plan where everyone is on the move.

Let's go back to last spring and an article written by a respected NBA reporter. "You can toss the playbook out the window when San Antonio comes to town. Preparing for them is like plotting an attack on a terrorist group. The Spurs can attack from any angle, but rarely is it premeditated . . . Studying their films is really a waste of time . . . They can write their game plan on their wrist bands: Push the ball up court quickly and shoot before the defense is set."

In answer to those words, Moe laid out the foundation to his philosophy. Said Moe, "People call it freelancing or playground, but we prefer to call it a passing game . . . Basketball is a game of movement and quickness. If you move quickly enough you can get open for a shot."

Amen say the Spurs players. Here, here, say all Spurs loyalists. That's the way to play, attack, and attack again from a different angle.

Moe, after finishing Erasmus High in Brooklyn, headed south to learn his basketball at the college level. He was All-American at North Carolina and during his stay there the Tar Heels were a cumulative 57-15.

The next two years found Moe playing professionally in Italy for Padua Petrarca in the Series A league. A quote about Moe worth resurrecting once more came from Coach Asa Nikolic. The famous Italian mentor said about the 6-6 Moe: "The greatest of them all remains always Douglas Moe."

The ABA came into being in 1967 and Moe returned home to be all-league for New Orleans before leading Oakland to the league title in the second season. He played three more years before calling it quits because of a damaged knee.

Having played on and off over the years with current Denver Coach Larry Brown, Moe rejoined his buddy with the Carolina Cougars. The next four years found Brown as the head coach and Moe as his devil's advocate assistant — two in Carolina and two in Denver.

Since coming to San Antonio where weather permits year round play, Moe has "refined" his golf game. And he has become an investor in Texas oil wells. One thing that carried over from his earlier days is his love for the greyhounds, and now Moe is a dog owner.

Through all this, Doug Moe basically has not changed his outlook. He still prefers his sneakers and T-shirts, and his wideopen brand of basketball. And Spurs fans everywhere are in total agreement.

BOB BASS
ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT ASSISTANT COACH

By the time you list all of Bob Bass' titles, time is about up. And by the time Bob Bass finishes all his duties, he can truly say he has put in a day's work.

First and foremost, Bass contributes from his bench seat during all Spurs contests. He is a master strategist in the basketball game, and Coach Moe is quick to consider his ideas.

Then, when the game is not going on, or there is no practice, Bass turns his talents to other areas with the Spurs. He is director of six summer weeks of camps for youngsters, he is a chief contributor to evaluating college talent, is a much-in-demand public speaker on behalf of the organization.

Bob Bass is 49-years-old, and his life has been basketball. He is a native Oklahoman, he played collegiately at Oklahoma Baptist. He coached high school in the Sooner state, and then was head man at OBU for 15 years. His 1966 OBU team won the NAIA, and Bass was the organization's coach of the year.

He joined the ABA in 1967 and has coached teams in Denver, Miami, Memphis, and San Antonio. He holds 251 victories in the pro ranks. Also he has been a professional general manager, and was director of ABA officials.

Bass has been in San Antonio for four years, two as head coach, and two in his current "several" jobs.

GEORGE KARL
ASSISTANT COACH

While this is George Karl's initial season as a coach in professional basketball, he is not exactly a rookie. Towards the end of the 1977-1978 season, when it was obvious his knees were not responding, the Spurs saw fit to name George a Spurs assistant coach, and he was in that chair for several games including playoffs.

Karl was an original Spur back in the fall of 1973, having signed a free agent pact out of North Carolina. He got in three good years in San Antonio before injuries began taking their toll. Over the last two years, he has been tormented with both knees, a back problem, and various other ailments. As a player he averaged 6.5 points and three assists.

After one more attempt to rehabilitate the knees last year, Karl accepted the coaching job, and has said that coaching will be it for him.

He is a native of Penn Hills, Pa., and was an All-American at North Carolina as his teams won seven tournament titles. In addition to his on-court duties, Karl is the principle source of collegiate scouting information to the Spurs. He figures to log a few miles during this year searching for future Spurs.

TRAINER

Officially, it's CAT. Certified Athletic Trainer, that's the Spurs Bernie LaReau. He is registered, he is fully approved to pursue his own version of the healing arts.

Bernie is the only trainer the Spurs have had in their five years in San Antonio. Prior to that, he was the head man in the Chicago Bears training room, and before that, he was with the Indiana Pacers of the ABA.

Bernie is a native of Kankakee, Ill., and is a graduate of St. Joseph's College in Indiana. After receiving his degree, he was the St. Joseph's trainer.

His jobs with the Pacers and with the early-day Spurs included being business manager. He still is involved to some extent in this area as Bernie is the team's traveling secretary.

Bernie is a man of many talents. He is chief operating officer in a Sports Medicine Rehabilitation Clinic in San Antonio, and is an investor in a real estate operation. And last year he was the subject to a leaguewide feature article because he owns a commercial worm farm.

GEORGE GERVIN

NBA SCORING CHAMPION He won the league's scoring title with a 27.22 average. That included a San Antonio franchise record 63 points on the final night of the season after leading or being second most of the year.

NBA ALL-PRO In balloting conducted by the NBA from among media persons in each league city, he was named to the first team as the highest vote-getting guard, and with the second highest vote total of all players.

MVP RUNNERUP In balloting from among his peer group, the players, Gervin received 80.5 votes compared to the 96 given to winner Bill Walton of Portland. Denver's David Thompson was third with only 28 votes.

SEAGRAM'S SEVEN CROWNS He received the Seagram's Seven Crowns of Sport award of $10,000 as the most "proficient and consistent player" in the NBA for the year. With a score of 100 being perfect, Gervin outdistanced the field with his computerized mark of 78.30.

CBS/CHEVROLET MVP He received the CBS/Chevrolet Most Valuable Player award as voted by personnel from the television network. After each game aired by CBS during the season, a player-of-the-game was chosen. From among those winners, the yearlong MVP was named.

SPORTING NEWS Gervin was named first team all-pro by the prestigeous publication THE SPORTING NEWS. He also was runnerup to Bill Walton in the Most Valuable Player balloting in the vote taken from among the NBA players.

BASKETBALL DIGEST This publication also named Gervin to it's first team all-pro, and in a feature article proclaimed him as the league's top guard.

MOST POPULAR PLAYER For the third year in a row, Gervin was named the Spurs Most Popular Player. This season the vote from among the fans was sponsored by the San Antonio LIGHT newspaper, and the Lone Star Brewing Co.

FRANCHISE RECORDS Over the course of the 1977-1978 season, Gervin set or tied 23 franchise marks. In the club's 10-year history, this was the most severe rewriting of the book by a single player in a single season.

SUPER STARS At season's end, Gervin was invited to participate in the 1978 version of television's Super Stars competition. Gervin is the first San Antonio player to be invited.

FRANCHISE HISTORY

THE DALLAS YEARS

1967-1968

Ancestor of the San Antonio Spurs was the Dallas Chaparrals, one of 11 teams that opened play in the American Basketball Association's inaugural season of 1967-1968. Former NBA star Cliff Hagan was the player-coach. Hagan guided Dallas to a 46-32 record, through the first round of the playoffs, and finally to a losing effort against New Orleans in the ABA Western Division finals. Opening night starters for Dallas were guards Bob Verga and Charlie Beasley, forwards John Beasley and Hagan, and center Bob Wilson. Cincy Powell was to replace Wilson by mid-year, and the loss of Verga to the military after 38 games would bring Maurice "Toothpick" McHartley to Dallas. Hagan was pro coach of the year in Texas; Max Williams, the former SMU star was the club's general manager.

1968-1969

Once more the Chaparrals were competitive, but would lose again to New Orleans in the playoffs after finishing with a 42-36 record. Two little-noticed draft choices, Ron Boone (8th round) and Glen Combs (5th round) were on their way to league stardom by season's end. Cincy Powell was becoming one of the league's toughest forwards, and John Beasley, the team's leading scorer, was named the MVP of the league's second All-Star Game in Louisville. Crowds remained modest but the team seemed to be gaining a foothold in Dallas.

1969-1970

The third edition of the Chaparrals was probably the best of the Dallas years. Glen Combs and Ron Boone gave the Chaps a potent backcourt while up front Manny Leaks, John Beasley and Cincy Powell were proving to be a high-scoring, good-rebounding threesome. The team seemed headed toward the finals of the playoffs but were upset in the first round by Los Angeles, coached by Bill Sharman. Cliff Hagan was fired after a 22-21 start. General Manager Max Williams took over the coaching reins and the club quickly reeled off a franchise record eight straight wins. Combs set a club season scoring record by averaging 22 points a game, and became the club's and one of the league's premier three-point shooters. Attendance remained the club's foremost problem, but prospects were bright with a young team that seemed to be one of the best in the league.

1970-1971

One Dallas investor commented about this year, "we couldn't have done more damage if we had set out deliberately to sabotage the franchise." The team became the Texas Chaparrals and played "home" games in Dallas, Fort Worth and Lubbock. Dallas interest dwindled and there was little support in the other cities. All momentum was gone. Cincy Powell went to Kentucky for Gene Moore in the summer and the teams tumbled to a 5-13 mark early-on. Max Williams resigned at Thanksiving and assistant Bill Blakely took over. In January Ron Boone and Glen Combs went to Utah for Wayne Hightower and Donnie Freeman, and Manny Leaks went to the Nets for two injured players. With only Freeman helping, the Chaps made the playoffs but lost to Utah and Boone and Combs. Both GM Williams and Coach Blakely were dismissed; Bob Briner came from World Team Tennis to be GM.

1971-1972

The Texas Chaparrals became the Dallas Chaparrals once more, and a high-priced campaign was launched to recapture identity and interest in Dallas. Tom Nissalke signed on as coach after being an assistant in Milwaukee . . . the franchise hosted its first-ever NBA-ABA exhibition game in September . . . and 7,800 paid the largest gate in the franchise's history to see that game. A dismal start including 11 straight road losses dulled the glitter. Concern for the future arose after the Chaps lost again in four straight to Utah in the playoffs. The bright spots included Nissalke being named coach of the year after the team won 26 of its last 42 games, and Donnie Freeman scored 20 or better in 38 straight games.

1972-1973

Before this season started, Nissalke jumped to the NBA Seattle Supersonics, and Babe McCarthy became the coach. Donnie Freeman, in a trade criticized by Dallas media, was gone, having been traded to Indiana for center Bob Netolicky. By mid-season the Dallas owners agreed to sell the team to a syndicate which intended to relocate the team in New Jersey. The deal fell through even after league approval, but by now it was apparent the Chaps were finished in Dallas. McCarthy, unsettled by the New Jersey announcement, resigned and moved to the University of Georgia. Assistant Coach Dave Brown finished out the year, and for the first time the club failed to make the playoffs, winning only 28 games and a mere eight contests on the road. Shortly after the season ended, the Dallas owners struck a unique deal with a San Antonio group, led by Angelo Drossos and B. J."Red" McCombs. The franchise was "leased" to the Alamo City group for three years, with an option to buy in the third year. The team moved south and the San Antonio Spurs were born.

THE SAN ANTONIO YEARS

1973-1974

Most observers said the Spurs would have little success upon their move from Dallas, especially when attendance fell as low as 1,700 for an October game. By mid-November, the club had started its rise. Swen Nater came from Virginia for a reported $300,000 and on November 11, with Nater in the lineup, the Spurs beat Kentucky before a sellout 10,146. Thereafter, attendance pushed 9,000 and the investors brought in George Gervin from Virginia. Angelo Drossos negotiated the outright purchase of the club from the Dallas group. Tom Nissalke had returned to coach the team, and the Spurs were 45-39 on the year and in the playoffs. Indiana beat the Spurs in seven games and the team averaged 6,800 for the year. Jack Ankerson was ABA executive-of-the-year and Nater was rookie-of-the-year. Only James Silas, Coby Dietrick and Rich Jones remained from the Dallas days.

1974-1975

Two events, only one scheduled, marked the second year. Tom Nissalke was fired on December 13. New Coach Bob Bass and the team recovered nicely to win a club record 51 games. James Silas and George Gervin became authentic superstars. The second major event was the Spurs hosting the ABA all-star game in January, San Antonio's first national sports exposure. The Spurs were upset in the playoffs by Indiana, but more than 330,000 fans paid to see the team play. John Begzos begame general manager, and Angelo Drossos was elected ABA vice president.

1975-1976

A stunning series of player deals in the off-season first brought Larry Kenon from the Nets for Swen Nater. Mike Gale came in a related purchase. Then Billy Paultz came in exchange for Rich Jones, Chuck Terry, Bobby Warren and Kim Hughes. Only James Silas, George Gervin, Coby Dietrick and George Karl remained from the previous year. The Spurs won another 50 games, and Silas was All-ABA. Attendance topped the 8,000 average mark. In the playoffs, Silas suffered a broken ankle in the first game, Gervin played with a broken right wrist, and the eventual champion Nets beat the Spurs in seven. In June, the long-awaited merger came and the Spurs were NBA after three short years in San Antonio. Bob Bass became assistant to President Angelo Drossos, and Doug Moe came from Denver to coach the Spurs.

1976-1977

Ticket sales hit a club record $1 million, and the Spurs won their NBA opener over Philadelphia. James Silas was lost to knee surgery. A record 12,594 fans saw the Spurs play their first NBA home game against Boston. Twelve San Antonio banks had loaned the team $5 million for operating capital, and the team established a 60,000-square mile TV network. George Gervin was named the first Spur in the NBA all-star game, and Spurs crowds became known nationally as CBS aired six games from the Arena. San Antonio beat Washington on March 28 and clinched an NBA playoff berth. On the year, the Spurs won 50 games, finished third in the Central Division, but lost the homecourt advantage and eventually a two-game series to Boston. The Spurs led the NBA in scoring at 115 a game, Gervin was second team All-NBA, and the club set attendance figures at 376,134 and an average 9,174.

1977-1978

Momentum was there . . . Spurs coming off a playoff berth . . . ticket sales more than $1 million . . . Arena roof up 33 feet for 6,000 more seats . . . and the club participated in first NBA draft. One hundred aspirants attended a summer walk-on camp . . . and in the fall Spurs defeated Boston opening night for first-ever win over the Celtics. Late December saw the Spurs begin surge by winning 18 of 22 games and gain the Central Division lead . . . the central title would be won with a 52-30 mark. George Gervin and Larry Kenon both were named all-star starters in Atlanta on February 5 . . . two days later Nets would be snowbound and first-ever game in South Texas postponed because of snow. In the playoffs the Spurs lost 2-4 to eventual champion Washington. On last night of the season . . . Gervin got 63 against New Orleans to win the NBA scoring title at 27.22 a game and be named all-pro. He won the Seagrams crown and was the CBS/Chevrolet MVP. George Karl was named assistant coach, Doug Moe was third in coach-of-the-year voting . . . and Angelo Drossos was named NBA Executive-of-the-Year.

HEMISFAIR ARENA SEATING/TICKETS

HOW TO PURCHASE TICKETS

Once again this season, Spurs single games tickets will be on sale at the team's box office located adjacent to the HemisFair Arena. Ticket office hours are 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. The Spurs have a drive-through window as well as walkup windows. Or, Spurs fans can telephone (512) 224-9578 to charge tickets. The ticket office mailing address is P.O. Box 530, San Antonio, Texas 78292.

In addition to paying cash for Spurs game tickets, fans can pay by using Visa charge cards, Mastercharge cards, or by a charge card from Sears Roebuck and Co.

For the second year, the Spurs and all Sears outlets in Greater San Antonio have a working agreement whereby fans can purchase their seats through the Sears cashier departments.

TICKETS AVAILABLE

The Spurs this season for the first time are utilizing a new balcony in the HemisFair Arena which has expanded seating capacity to more than 16,000. Tickets on the lower level are priced at $8, $7, $6 and $4. Seats are priced at $8, $6, and $4 in the new balcony.

As in the past, tickets will be available three games in advance during the 1978-1979 season.

GROUP SALES

The Spurs group sales program, because of the expanded Arena, is more extensive than ever before. For the 1978-1979 season in San Antonio, 31 home games have been designated group sales nights.

For seats in the $6 and $4 sections, groups can obtain discount rates depending on the size of the particular group. Cutoff points for discounts are groups of 25 minimum, 50 minimum, or 200 and more.

Members of the Spurs sales staff will work with the groups in arranging pregame or post-game party facilities to go along with the exciting action of NBA basketball.

Complete groups sales information is available through the Spurs' ticket office at (512) 224-9578.
